Thank you so much for picking up Killing Me! Volume !!!

The phrase "killing me" can be used to express something unbearable or totally absurd, but "You're killing me" can be used to mean you love something so much you might die, or something like that ♡ Isn't that profound? To be completely honest, I reached my limit with English back in junior high, so I'm not really all that confident. Anyone who's actually good with English, please cut me some slack. And that's it for my afterword.

TRANSLATION NOTES

Common Honorifics

No honorific: Indicates familiarity or closeness; if used without permission or reason, addressing someone in this manner would constitute an insult.

-san: The Japanese equivalent of Mr./Mrs./Miss. If a situation calls for politeness, this is the fail-safe honorific.

-chan: An affectionate honorific indicating familiarity used mostly in reference to girls; also used in reference to cute persons or animals.

-senpai: A suffix used to address upperclassmen or more experienced coworkers.

Carmilla: Miyoko refers to herself as a “Carmilla type of vampire.” This is not a usual form of categorization for vampires, but rather a direct reference to the title character of the 1872 Gothic novella by Joseph Sheridan Le Fanu, Carmilla. Preceding Dracula by 26 years, Carmilla is about a female vampire who preys upon a young woman named Laura. She makes romantic advances toward Laura and strong displays of affection, despite the two not knowing each other for long.

Hello there,
I am Akiyama. To me, a girls' love, kill-or-be-killed comedy about a vampire and a young girl is kind of like a Hamburg-steak riceomelette covered in curry—packed with calories! I hope you eat this story up!

A black and white manga panel. At the top, a large speech bubble contains the text "OF COURSE I WILL!". Below it, another speech bubble from Aya says "WH-WH-WH-WH-WH-WH-WH WHAT DO YOU THINK YOU'RE DOING...?". In the center, Senpai is shown holding Aya from behind; she has her eyes closed and a distressed expression, while he looks down at her. To the left, a third speech bubble from Senpai reads "NO WAY... S... SENPAI". On the right side of the panel, there are sound effects: "Hiss!" near the top and "Aya (Panic) Wa Wa" near the bottom where Aya is being held. The background consists of simple jagged lines representing mountains or trees.
